

EBAH Terms & Conditions for Account Holders

The European Board for Accreditation in Hematology (EBAH) offers professionals active in the field of hematology an online platform where they can register as account holders and maintain a record of their participation in EBAH-accredited educational activities and the credits they have earned. This service is provided free of charge.

To maintain high-quality accreditation standards, EBAH has established two sets of Standards and Guidelines:

- EBAH Standards and Guidelines for Activity Accreditation governing the accreditation of individual educational activities.
- EBAH Standards and Guidelines for Provider Accreditation governing the accreditation of CME providers.

By creating an account in the EBAH system, you agree to the following Terms and Conditions.

- Users are eligible to create an EBAH account based on the information they provide. EBAH does not verify or validate the information submitted, including details relating to education, training, professional experience, or credentials.
- EBAH account holders are responsible for ensuring that their personal information is complete, accurate, and up to date. All information provided must be truthful and based on factual data. The use of false information, aliases, pseudonyms, or any other misleading or inaccurate details is not permitted.
- The creation of an EBAH account is voluntary. By registering for an account, applicants confirm that the information provided regarding their professional status is accurate and that they meet the applicable requirements.
- EBAH account holders remain at all times solely and exclusively responsible for their actions and for all professional and medical services they provide.
- EBAH does not, either explicitly or implicitly, assess, guarantee, endorse, or warrant the professional standing, qualifications, competencies, services, or actions of any account holder.
- Possession of an EBAH account does not constitute, and must not be interpreted as evidence of compliance with any professional, regulatory, or legal requirements for the practice of medicine, whether generally or within the field of hematology.
- EBAH does not provide references, testimonials, recommendations, or any other personal information about its account holders to third parties, including national hematology societies, professional associations, employers, or other organizations.

viii. Personal information and contact details provided by account holders will not be used by EBAH for commercial advertising, marketing, or promotional purposes.

viii. EBAH operates as an independent accreditation body. Its administrative and operational activities are supported by the EHA Foundation.
